

REASON FOR RETURN OF SOVIET'S CHINESE AMBASSADOR GIVEN

Bogomolov Predicts China May Collapse Fithin Two Months

CONSIDER THE ASPECTS

If Russia Waits Longer To Intervene May Be Faced With Stronger Army

By H. R. Knickerbocker

SHANGHAI, Oct. 11.—(INS)—The real reason for the spectacular return of the Soviet's Chinese ambassador, Dmitry Bogomolov, to Moscow was revealed for the first time today on unimpeachable information from Nanking authorities.

Bogomolov, according to these sources, presented the report to the Kremlin that Russia, if she expects ever to intervene against the Japanese in China, must act within two months because the grave possibility exists that the Chinese will collapse within that time.

If Russia waits longer, she will likely be faced not with a weaker Japan, entangled and dispersed in China, as the Kremlin hoped, but with a Japanese army stronger and more strategically placed than ever before.

Foreign observers at Nanking are divided on the question as to whether, in view of this situation, Russia will dare to enter the conflict or will risk the delay.

But the weight of evidence is against Russian entry.

Before the present war started the Japanese military attaché reported to Tokyo that the execution of Russian generals crippled the Red Army. Then the Japanese army pushed against the Russians on the Amur River and found such little resistance that Japan decided it could ignore the Red Army.

The war on China started at that point. It is now considered highly significant that, in spite of the constant reports of the shipment of Russian airplanes and the presence of Russian or Mongolian Red army pilots with the Chinese forces, none of the foreign military observers at Nanking has ever seen any, and none believes they're there.

Nevertheless Bogomolov's report puts the decision before the Kremlin in its most vital form, for the breakdown of Chinese resistance in the North is so serious that it has completely upset Russian calculations.

Substantially, Bogomolov reported: First, that the Chinese are breaking up all along the northern front, and are not likely to be able to fight longer than another two months.

Second, this development was rendered more likely by the fact that 70,000 troops under the young Marshal Chang Hsueh-Liang, now facing the Japanese south of Tientsin, have

Bombard Madrid

Madrid, Oct. 11.—Spain's capital today received a reminder when insurgent artillery batteries twice bombarded the city.

Insurgent guns from their hilltop positions west of the capital pumped shells into the heart of the capital for an hour as many thousands were going to work at 8.30. Firing was resumed at 10.30. Frequent shellings of Madrid is resorted to by the rebels to maintain the menace around the capital so its defenders cannot be used against the insurgents on other fronts.

Insurgents also scored a major victory at sea, according to reports, when two destroyers in an hour's bombardment set the Spanish cargo steamer Cabo Santo Tome afire off Bone, on the Algerian coast. One member of the crew was killed, six were wounded and the ship is sinking, said the report. Survivors were taken to Laccalle. The Cabo Santo Tome was en route from Russia with supplies for the Spanish Loyalists.

HISTORIC

ST. JAMES' CHURCH

St. James' Church, Bristol, was the subject of an interesting paper read at a meeting of the Bucks County Historical Society on Saturday, by the Rev. George E. Boswell, rector.

HISTORY OF ST. JAMES', A PRE-REVOLUTIONARY WAR PARISH, GIVEN IN PAPER READ BY RECTOR AT MEETING OF BUCKS CO. HISTORICAL SOCIETY

Church Services Were Established by Church of England in Bristol a Number of Years Before Building Was Erected; Growth of the Parish is Traced by Rev. G. E. Boswell

The following paper was read by the Rev. George E. Boswell, rector of St. James' Episcopal Church, at the Autumn meeting of Bucks County Historical Society, Saturday afternoon, at Walnut Grove Farms:

By REV. GEORGE E. BOSWELL, S.T.B., Rector St. James' Church

Mr. President and members of the Bucks County Historical Society:

The invitation to read a paper here today on Historic St. James' Church of Bristol, was accepted by me with a deep sense of profound privilege; for to my mind the history of such a parish merits not only our consideration, but also in reality it should be a stirring challenge to all.

St. James is a parish of pre-revolutionary war days, and of course no institution which has reached even 50 or 100 years in age ever attempts to camouflage its age; that is pretends to be younger than it really is. On the contrary historic institutions flaunt their age in one's face, proclaiming it by every available means. This year marks the 225th anniversary of the completion of the first church building of the fine old parish which we are considering. As a matter of fact, however, church services were established by the Church of England in Bristol a number of years before a building was erected. Fragmentary records show that as early as 1705, services were started and maintained in Bristol by the Rev. Thorowgood Moore, the rector of St. Mary's Church, Burlington.

It is curious that St. Mary's, Burlington, N. J., was not always named St. Mary's. I understand at the laying of the cornerstone it was called St. Mary's. That was in 1703. The first charter, however, was granted by Queen Anne, in 1704, and the name was changed to St. Anne's, an honor to her Majesty the Queen. The second charter granted in 1709, however, restored the name of St. Mary's, although the same queen issued both charters.

Unfortunately Mr. Moore was drowned while on his way back to England in 1707, and for several years after his death there was a lapse in

TWO SUITS ARE ENTERED AGAINST TAXI DRIVER

Claim of $2,202.50 is Made Against South Langhorne Man by Washingtonian

ANOTHER ASKS $1,000

SOUTH LANGHORNE, Oct. 11.—Two suits have been entered at Doylestown in the Court of Common Pleas against Ross E. Stewart, local taxi driver, for damage claims of $2,202.50. One claim is made by Virginia McWhirt, Washington, D. C.

According to the statement of claim, the plaintiff was the passenger in a car, driven by Lawrence M. Cox, November 28, 1936, when it collided with a taxi cab driven by the defendant on the Lincoln Highway between South Langhorne and Trenton, N. J. She is asking for the sum of $1,000.

She avers that she suffered numerous body injuries and that medical and surgical expenses were involved. In a second suit, in which Ross E. Stewart is named the defendant, growing out of the same collision, Lawrence M. Cox, also of Washington, D. C., claims damages amounting to $1202.50.

In the statement of claim, Cox avers that his car was damaged to the extent of $202.50, and that he suffered various body injuries for which he claims the sum of $1,000.

He also charges the defendant with attempting to make a "U" turn on the highway and carelessly and negligently operating his car.

Commending Cooperation

A GOOD deal of nonsense has been spilled in the last few days about the President's Chicago speech urging concerted action among the peace-loving nations—a speech quickly followed, under his direction, by State Department denunciations of Japan as an aggressor, treaty-breaking nation. Some of the comment, if taken seriously, is well calculated to distort the view and destroy a sense of proportion.

FOR EXAMPLE, take the two most inflammatory contentions which have gone out over the radio and through the press. In one case, a completely ignoble motive is attributed to Mr. Roosevelt; in the other, a total lack of knowledge as to the consequences of his words as the responsible

Busy Afternoon Occurs For The Yardley Civic Club

YARDLEY, Oct. 11.—With William B. Lange, Abington, as guest speaker, Yardley Civic Club held its October meeting, Thursday. Mr. Lange had as his subject "Abington Memorial Hospital Hospitalization Plan" and explained in detail the working of the pre-paying of hospital bills, created to assist those of moderate means.

Miss Sue B. Hilson, Yardley Library, spoke on "Get Acquainted With Your Library." Miss Hilson stressed the fact that the library meant a great deal to people during the depression, stating that the Yardley Library had on its shelves 575,000 books, with over 100 of these new this year, and subscriptions to more than 30 magazine publications, with a number of additional picture and reference books set aside for school book reports. A plea was made for anyone with spare time to assist with the mending of torn or damaged books.

Business session was presided over by Mrs. John B. Force. Mrs. Robert Barbour gave a brief history of Helen Hunt Jackson, who was born in October, and read one of her best loved poems, "October's Bright Blue Weather," with her best known book, "Ramona." Mrs. Force read an original poem of thanks for the red maple tree given to her by the Club as a wedding gift.

Mrs. Lura R. Ross gave a report of the treasurer, and Mrs. Harry K. Ambler spoke on the trip made to Franklin Institute.

Mrs. Harvey J. Funk, for the program committee, reported that Richard H. Cadmus will give a talk on "The Seeing Eye," October 21st.

Plans were made to donate $25 to the library drive. As delegates to the Bucks County Federation meeting to be held in the Woodside Community house on October 29th, Mrs. D. Taylor Ivins and Mrs. Harry K. Ambler were named, with Miss Elizabeth S. Weeks and Miss Margaret Hilson, as alternates. Mrs. Paul Arata presented three names for membership, Miss Elizabeth Clayton, Mrs. William Howett, and Mrs. Carl F. Ogren.

Ten dollars was donated to the Kathryn G. Ryan Scholarship fund for the county federation.

A chorus has been formed by Miss Lillian VanArtsdalen, director, with Mrs. Howett accompanist. This group sang.

Mrs. William Rorer and Mrs. Lura Ross gave a report on the Southeastern district meeting held at Ursinus College.

THE GREAT GAME OF POLITICS

By FRANK R. KENT

head of the nation is ascribed to him, either notion seems justified by the facts. First, there is the allegation that this speech was the carefully timed climax of the Western trip, that its real purpose was to free the public sense of smell from the unsavory odor of the Black mess.

THE CHARGE IS made that actually the trip would not have been taken at all had it not seemed politically expedient for the President to be in the West when Mr. Black landed in the East, and that his forthright utterance on foreign affairs was solely with the idea of obliterating thoughts of the Klan and giving Congress something to think about when he convenes it in extra session next month—if he does. To accept this explanation, one must be consumed with a feeling against Mr. Roosevelt too intense to permit crediting him with any honest or patriotic purpose.

IT DOES NOT in the least involve condoning the reckless and inexcusable conduct of the President.

Silvery Alpine Slopes Are Background for "Thin Ice"

A gay and magnificent musical that skims in shimmering delight along the silvery Alpine slopes, brings Sonja Henie and Tyrone Power together in the Twentieth Century-Fox picture, "Thin Ice," which opens Monday and Tuesday at the Grand Theatre.

Sonja has come to a hamlet in the Swiss Alps to accept a position as a skating instructress at a magnificent hotel. Prince Rudolph also arrives with Alan Hale and Maurice Cass, each heading a rival contingent, to settle a neutrality pact. He feigns illness in the hope that the continual bickering between Hale and Cass will lead to a quicker signing of the pact.

Having escaped through the back door of the hotel, Tyrone goes to the village inn and registers as a reporter. Then he goes out to ski and meets Sonja. Their first meeting is only casual, but when villagers see Sonja entering a royal car that night with George Glivot, whom they believe to be the Prince, the news quickly spreads that she is being favored by Tyrone.

The agents of the two foreign countries also believe the rumor and attempt to win Sonja to their side, and through her get to Tyrone. She refuses, but when one of them dangles a huge offer before her ne'er-do-well uncle, Raymond Walburn, he accepts.

In the meantime, the romance continues to grow, with Sonja still mindful of the rumor circulating through the village. The agents discover they have been tricked by Walburn and through sympathy for each other, become fast friends. With these matters complicating the situation, the arrival of the Prime Minister (Sig Ruman) opens the way to a happy conclusion.

HISTORIANS MEET AND HEAR FOUR INTERESTING PAPERS

Bucks Co. Historical Society Holds Fall Session At Walnut Grove Farms

25 NEW MEMBERS

Rev. George E. Boswell Gives History of St. James' Church

Four papers of historic interest were read at the autumn meeting of Bucks County Historical Society, Saturday afternoon, on which occasion the Hon. Joseph R. Grundy and Miss Margaret R. Grundy were hosts at Walnut Grove Farms.

Two of the papers were presented by the society's president, Dr. B. F. Fackenthal, Jr., Riegelsville, these being entitled "The duPonts Select a Site For Their Powder Works," and "The Great Chain at West Point and Other Obstructions Placed in the Hudson River during the War of the Revolution." A paper of intense local interest was read by the Rev. George E. Boswell, S. T. D., rector of St. James' Episcopal Church, this being "Historic St. James' Church, Bristol." The fourth paper presented to the 130 gathered for the program of the afternoon was by Hugh B. Eastburn, Bristol, the subject being "Charles Ellet, Jr., Engineer and Architect."

In welcoming the guests, Mr. Grundy reminded that "We have passed through the last two decades with more important changes than ever before."

Mr. Grundy told how William Penn established his home in the Delaware River Valley. He recounted how the valley was fought over for approximately 100 years, first by the Dutch and Swedes, then with the English, later driving out other nationalities.

Turning attention to Bucks County the speaker informed that "Some little time ago I ran across through the courtesy of a friend, a volume that to my mind, set forth the development of what was one of the most important plans of transportation developments that took place in the county of Bucks. I refer to the Delaware Division of the Lehigh Canal. Of course, it was built for the purpose of getting the anthracite coal, that vast deposit, to market, and therefore it furnished the first departure from the means of transportation such as horseback or other crude ways through the woods. It was the first great method of transportation, and probably in its time did more to make the county, develop it, and bring more money here, than other methods. This book is written by the man who was the spirit that developed this canal system. In reading it you come to realize what the anthracite coal trade is to Pennsylvania, its annual output for decade after decade has run somewhere around a half billion dollars a year. . . . To my mind that canal was one of the means, the principal means at the time, of opening up what has been a great contribution to the vast reservoir of wealth that Pennsylvania offers to its citizenship."

The paper dealing with "Charles Ellet, Jr., Engineer and Architect," and read by Mr. Eastburn, recalled that "The first 60 years of the last century witnessed amazing developments in many fields, but particularly, in transportation. . . . An outstanding leader in this pageant of progress was born in a log house in Falls Township, Bucks County, January 1, 1810. His ability and achievements were not fully recognized during his life and have since been almost forgotten. It is now my privilege to tell you something of the life of Charles Ellet, Jr."

Mr. Eastburn mentioned the purchase of a farm in "Pennsbury Manor" by Ellet's father, and told of the history of his mother. Charles Ellet, Jr., whose first work was as a rodmán with a surveying party on the Susquehanna, was told of, and his subsequent work as an engineer and architect. Ellet's life was reviewed, he having become a colonel in the United States Army.

The story of "The Great Chain at West Point and Other Obstructions placed in the Hudson River during the War of the Revolution," which was presented by Dr. Fackenthal, was eagerly listened to. The account recalled how the Hudson River played an important part in the development of this country. This water-way was an objective of the British during the Revolutionary war, and it was readily seen that "by its control the settled part of the country would be cut off from the rest of the country, and moreover give the enemy control of the territory leading to the

HARDER RACE WON

Endeavour I, like her successor, Endeavour II, failed to lift the America's Cup. But Endeavour I has triumphed in a more dramatic and more perilous test of her qualities as a thoroughbred of the waves. A defeated challenger for the international yachting crown is the victorious challenger of the wrath of the Atlantic and the fury of the storm gods.
Fourteen days after Endeavour I broke away from her tow in a terrific storm off Nantucket Light, she was sighted 260 miles off Fastnet Irish Free State. In the fortnight after the towline broke, hope virtually was given up for the missing yacht. A false report from the Azores stirred momentary hope which was dashed again. Finally, on the very day of the arrival at Gosport of the missing boat's sister-yacht and successor, Endeavour II, word was flashed from an oil tanker that Endeavour I had been sighted off Ireland, proceeding under her own sail.
Some may wonder why Endeavour, when that towline parted off Nantucket Light, did not put about for an American port. Perhaps the answer is that such a proceeding simply did not occur to her skipper—the same skipper who once sailed one of Sir Thomas Lipton's Shamrocks across the Atlantic "under bare poles." Endeavour I had, crossed the Atlantic under her own sail when she challenged for the America's Cup a few years ago. Why couldn't she do it again?
She did. Lloyds once more rang the Lutine bell—this time in earnest—and Gosport's cheers for Endeavour II were mingled with cheers for her elder sister. It was a greater feat than crossing the finish line first on a triangular racing course.

NOT CATASTROPHIC

Dr. Hu Shih, Chinese scholar, sojourning in San Francisco, has exposed the "military weaknesses of Japan." Dr. Hu sees the principal Japanese weakness in the fact that the invading power has "failed miserably" in the use of air power. The Chinese scholar contends that the bombing of Shanghai, Nanking and other cities has accomplished little in a military sense.
Here is how Dr. Hu puts it:
"All military strategists have long agreed that the opening move in the next world war must be a smashing, telling blow delivered from the air. Such has not been delivered against us. China has little concentration of force. She is neither centralized nor highly industrialized. Therefore, the bombings are unpleasant and unfortunate but not catastrophic."
So all the devastation dealt by Japanese air bombers is "unpleasant and unfortunate but not catastrophic." Dr. Hu seems to have something there—even if it only is some sort of championship as an optimist.
But when Henry Ford was voted the most popular man in industry the voices of Messrs. Lewis and Martin and their associates were held to silence.
"We have been a wasteful nation," said Mr. Roosevelt, speaking at Boise, Idaho. None should know that better than the President.

So long as the League of Nations does not say it with bombs, Japan will continue to express its regrets with flowery words.

ECHOES OF THE PAST

By Courier Staff Member

Review of the news as it appeared in the Bucks County Gazette issue dated at Bristol, Mar. 30, 1876. The Gazette, a weekly newspaper published in Bristol, was discontinued following its merger with the Courier.

On last Sunday evening about half past nine o'clock, Stephen H. Carr, butcher, was knocked down and robbed near the Friends' Meeting House on Wood street. He was found in an unconscious state by Gilbert Randall and Charles Conn, who had their attention called in that direction by seeing two men turn the corner of Wood and run down Market street. Mr. Carr states that he was attacked by two men, who struck him, one on the forehead and the other on his neck and in the jaw, the latter blow causing a severe wound from which the blood flowed freely. The thieves then rifled his pockets and took about $20.

DAVISVILLE—The board walks in this village are handsomely appreciated. Our village teacher is studying medicine. Farm hands here are plenty, and wages low. We hear of some parties asking and receiving $8 per month.

On Sunday morning last workmen commenced tearing down the railroad bridge across the canal at Mill street, preparatory to building a new one. In order to do this work without interfering with the running of trains, one side of the old bridge is removed at a time, a switch being placed above and below the bridge so that all trains can use the same track until the bridge is completed. The new bridge, which is to be of iron, is expected to be put in position inside of two weeks.

Constable Yardley will sell the borough wharves on Saturday. The revival meetings of the Baptist Church have come to a close. Cottage prayer meetings are substituted.

Joseph Sherman is manufacturing 100,000 strawberry baskets. An enterprising clothing firm in Philadelphia pays for an advertisement stenciled on each one.

The little waiting room on the opposite side of the track from the Bristol depot is to be moved to the freight house, and will be converted into an office for freight agent Hall.

The church at Bristol was looked more difficult to re-establish the after for the most part during its early church than it did to organize it a years by the Rector of St. Mary's, century before.

The Rev. John Talbot died in 1727 became the Provost of the University and the Rev. Robert Weyman under- of Pennsylvania, followed, and he suc- ceeded in getting some little interest. Under him the building was tempo- rarily repaired and put into fairly good place. In 1839 a famous wedding took place in St. James, that of Robert Rev. 1740 the Rev. Colin Campbell was ap- pointed to succeed the Rev. Lindsay at Burlington and he also took charge of the work at Bristol and at Mt. Holly. N. J. He remained in charge until his death in 1769.

In 1767 the Rev. Jonathan Odell succeeded Mr. Campbell at Burlington and he also took charge of the work at Bristol. He was a loyalist refugee during the war of Independence and escaped to England.

During the Revolutionary War the church at Bristol suffered greatly. It was at that time that rum was brought into the colonies and great quantities of it came to Bristol. The moral tone of society was so degenerated that the church was virtually forgotten, and the building fell into utter decay. The rector, who was thought to be loyal to the Crown, was driven out, and the venerable house of God was desecrated and dismantled, after having served the community for three quarters of a century as the only church, save the Quaker meeting house. The fine communion silver given by Queen Ann was stolen, many of the records were lost, the graves of many notable people were trampled upon by man and beast, and the church building for a while was occupied by a troop of American cavalry, the news being used as stalls for the horses. Nothing was saved but two chairs and a table from the chancel, which was installed in this church, the gift of Sarah Keene, a famous woman, whose home still today stands as a residence for aged women of decadent fortunes.
After the war, the building for a number of years was abandoned and became nothing more than a rook's nest. The fragmentary records show, however a continued thread of existgiven by one of the charter members of the church, but it was sold after the revolutionary war to help repair the church building. Two other rec- tories have been lost due to the non- payment of taxes.

One of the most regrettable incidents in the long history of St. James' parish was the petty dissension in the Sunday School which in 1855 caused a split in the congregation. A new church was formed by the dissenting members against the wishes of the Bishop and the Convocation but after 14 years it was recognized as St. Paul's Church, whose rector was the late Thomas Garland, who later be- came the Bishop of Pennsylvania. Neither congregation flourished, for a house divided against itself cannot but fail. Finally both congregations again merged into one and after a year under the diplomatic leadership of the Rev. Robert Morgan the breach was healed. The frame building which had been erected by St. Paul's congrega- tion was sold to the Lutheran Church and the money was used to purchase the present rectory of the parish.

The most notable gift of recent years is the magnificent stained glass window over the altar, which was given by Mrs. Theresa Grooves, daughter of Arthur Dorrance, one-time senior warden of the parish. It is considered one of D'Ascenzio's finest windows and cost $10,000 and $1,000 to install it. The Rev. H. Stuart Paynter was then rector of the church.

During the last decade extensive re- pairs have been made to the rectory, church and parish house, and much of the indebtedness of the parish has been reduced, and a great many have been added to the church roll by con- firmation. Several memorials, silver alms basins, lectern and pulpit lights, front door lantern and baptismal bowl have been given and dedicated.

No one could adequately estimate the output of such a historic parish as St. James, Bristol. To have weath- ered the storms, the strain and stress of the years is an achievement to be proud of it and it is a challenge to all today to march forward and right on- ward. For two and a quarter centur- ies of time, St. James' Church has served the community; through times of war and peace; through consecra- tion and desecration, through divine worship of the faithful and through de- filement of vandals. Truly, this fine old church is a sacred relic of the past and an inspiring symbol of Christian- ity of the present. Historic St. James has behind it a great heritage, one which is well worth preserving and building upon. To have a past tense calls for devotion and inspiration, and St. James Church today stands, as it always has stood, ready to welcome all who seek its ministrations and to be- stow God's blessing on all who enter its sacred portals.

cusable things he has done to the country, nor mean any weakening in conviction as to the soundness of his domestic policies and the evil effect of his demagogic class appeals, to reject the suggestion that he is so lost to decency as formally to declare an immense and important foreign policy solely for the purpose of removing his personal political embarrassment—and to do this with the civilized world clearly trembling on the verge of disaster. That would mean a total disregard of the responsibility of the great office he holds. It would be inconceivably degrading. It would make him completely contemptible, and it does not make sense. It ought to be dismissed.

THE OTHER contention is almost equally incredible. It is aimed not at the purpose of the President's words but at their effect. The assertion is that he has taken a step which hastens the inevitable general war and is certain to involve us in it. Such silly statements as that "he has lighted the fuse for a general explosion" and "the crack of doom has sounded" and "war now cannot be averted," have been belled into the ears of millions of people. It seems a dreadful thing to do—and an unbalanced view to take. Actually, what Mr. Roosevelt has done is the only logical and sensible thing he could do. Moreover, failure to take this position meant a repudiation of the treaty obligations of the United States and the adoption of an isolationist attitude conflicting alike with common sense and consistency.

IN ASSOCIATING ourselves with the League of Nations so far as the Eastern situation is concerned, we merely continue the Far Eastern policy of the Hoover Administration. To have done anything less would have given practical encouragement to the brutality of the Japanese course. It may be that a general war is inevitable and it may be that in the end we will be drawn into it. But to assert that Mr. Roosevelt's advocacy of concerted action among the peace-seeking nations and our support of the League's position makes it inevitable is ridiculous. The Roosevelt attitude adds our weight to that of England and France. Perhaps all three, acting together, cannot save civilization. Perhaps civilization cannot be saved, but at least the chances are better with America actively co-operating instead of sucking its thumb like a scared fat boy, afraid to go in and unable to stay out. Perhaps, our League association and aggressor nation denunciation does clash with the philosophy of the present Neutrality Act, but what of it?

Every clear-headed man has recognized it as an absurdly impractical act, bound to be repudiated the moment it met reality.

Great Lakes and the basin of the St. Lawrence River, and therefore easy access to their army in Canada." It was mentioned that General Washington was well aware of the strategic position of this gateway, and early set about to protect it against the gun boats of the British, by placing obstructions in the Hudson to prevent them from ascending the river. The appointment of the secret committee to take charge of the river obstructions was told of, and also the five different plans attempted, all of which were failures, excepting only the fifth and last one, which consisted of the so-called "Great Chain" or sometimes referred to as the "Putnam Chain" at West Point.

In Dr. Fackenthal's second paper, "The DuPonts Selecting a Site for Their Powder Works," the examining of locations on several streams in New Jersey, including the Musconetcong, which empties into the Delaware River at Riegelsville, N. J., was mentioned. The final selection of a location on the Brandywine Creek at Wilmington, Del., resulted in the building of the first plant of the duPonts in 1802. This was the beginning of the now extensive work of E. I. duPont de Nemours & Company, the firm perpetuating the name of its founder, E. I. duPont de Nemours, a town on the Seine in Northern France. The small beginning, and great growth of the company was traced by Dr. Fackenthal.

Names of 25 individuals were presented for membership, and accepted, these being: Col. and Mrs. John A. Hawkins, Solebury; Hon. Webster Grim, George M. Hart, Miss Helen Ryan, Miss Elizabeth K. Moore, Miss Gertrude S. Johnson, Mrs. Warren S. Long, Doylestown; Robert H. Darrah, Hartsville; Mrs. Hugh B. Eastburn, Mrs. Emil Metzger, Mr. and Mrs. Earl Tomb, Bristol; H. Bennett, Penns Park; Dr. and Mrs. Howard M. Kenner, Philadelphia; Thomas H. Low, Jr., Thomas H. Low, Jr., Quakertown.

A copy of the book "Josiah White's History, Given By Himself," was presented to each attendant at the session by the hosts. This history gives in detail the circumstances which led to the introduction of canal navigation and the use of anthracite coal in Pennsylvania.

On motion of Judge Calvin S. Boyer, Doylestown, a vote of appreciation was extended to Miss Grundy and Mr. Grundy for the delightful afternoon. The Spring meeting, in May, will be held in Doylestown, and the meeting for the autumn of 1938, will be at "Bird-in-Hand," Newtown, with Edward Barnsley as host.

Officers in addition to Dr. Fackenthal are: Judge Calvin S. Boyer, Doylestown, vice-president; Horace M. Mann, Doylestown, secretary-treasurer; George MacReynolds, Doylestown, librarian.

Behind the Scenes in HOLLYWOOD

By HARRISON CARROLL

Copyright, 1937

King Features Syndicate, Inc.

HOLLYWOOD—Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer won a round the other day in its court battle with Freddie Bartholomew.

At the moment that the judge handed down his decision, I was on the set talking to the boy who is being groomed as Freddie's successor in case the final ruling goes against the studio.

His name is Ronald Sinclair and he already is playing a role that was to have been Freddie's—the youthful hero of "Thoroughbreds Don't Cry".

Ronald was signed by M. G. M. about a month ago. He comes from New Zealand and his real name is Ra Hould. He played with Merle Oberon and Brian Aherne in "Beloved Enemy", and he has had stage experience.

The two boys are only a month apart in age (13), and both are in the eighth grade. There is less than a half-inch difference in their heights. Other measurements are so close that Ronald is able to wear the clothes that were made for Freddie to use in the picture. Their accents are the same and their voices are remarkably similar. They even brush their hair alike.

Of special interest to M. G. M., there is no family problem to contend with him on the set. His father, Mr. A. Hould, is a rather diffident man who wears a Van Dyke beard. He and Mrs. Hould are middle-aged. They have two daughters. One is a London actress. The other, now 17, lives with them.

Ronald's parents won't say what he is earning, but they are satisfied for the present.

"I think we'll leave the lawyers out of this," Mr. Hould told me. "Then maybe we'll make a few profits."

A little bewildered at the sudden spotlight in which he finds himself, Ronald hopes he'll make good. He met Freddie Bartholomew once at a party.

"I liked him very much," said the boy who now is hailed as Freddie's successor on the screen.

While Freddie Bartholomew was having his court troubles, Hollywood was meeting rebuff in its attempts to secure another child star for the screen. Dolores Costello, in the midst of a film comeback herself, turned down the third offer of a screen test for six-year-old John Blythe Barrymore, Jr.

"I don't think it's fair for any child to decide his career for him," declared the actress. "Later if he wants to become an actor, it's all right with me."

Grace Moore is making emphatic denial of an item printed elsewhere that her picture, "The King Steps Out," was barred in Japan because she failed to bow before the royal box in her last appearance at Tokio. It couldn't be true, she says, because she has never been in Japan.

It's odd how this story keeps cropping up about the star. Last year, about the same time, she was denying rumors that she offended King Gustav of Sweden by failing to bow before the royal box during a concert at Stockholm.

On her first wedding anniversary (Sept. 27), Ann Sothern looked back on 24,000 miles of commuting between Hollywood and the towns where Roger Pryor was appearing with his orchestra. The star faces another year of the same thing. She won't be able to see Pryor, even in this fashion, until Christmas.

Chatter... Quite an exciting moment when Clark Gable, accompanied by Carole Lombard, almost brushed elbows with Rhea Gable in the cocktail lounge at the Tennis club... Eleanor Brooks, once a dancer with Ted Lewis' band, is in town to crash the movies. In the old days, she made George Raft's heart beat faster.

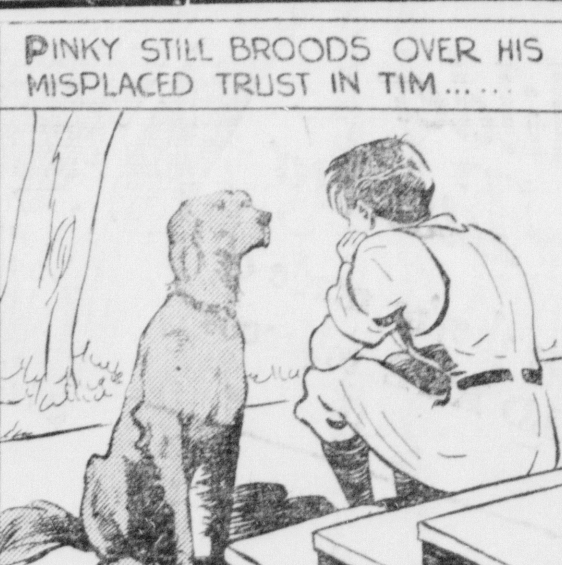

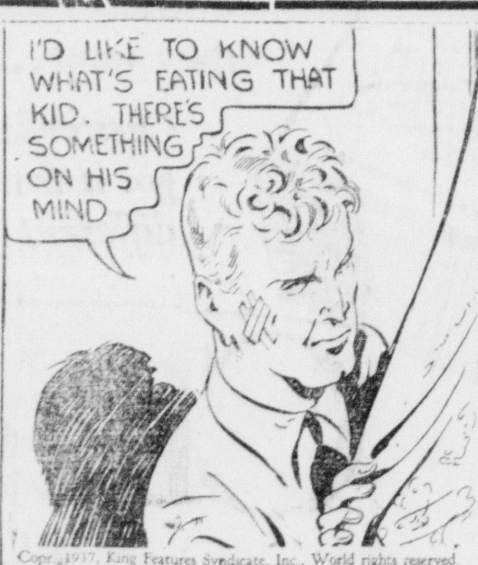

... Glipped at the Pomona Fair: Paula Stone and George Mason and Glenda Farrell and Drew Ebersson... And they say Hollywood is so sophisticated.

... There's a new Merry-Go-Round in Frank Kerwin's cafe... Yeah, the old one broke down... Virginia Bruce's chair on the set has her name painted on the back... only it says Virginia Bruce Gilbert... And Mrs. John Wayne is chaperoning Loretta Young on a trip to Lake Arrowhead. The attraction is Joseph Mankiewicz, who is vacationing there.

EDDIE SULLIVAN and CHARLIE SCHMIDT

BRISTOL HIGH SCHOOL
DEFEATS BRYN-ATHYN, 7-0

By "Herm" Corn

Following up the brilliant 15-0 victory over Doylestown, in their second fray of the 1937 season, the Bristol Bunnies smashed through a powerful Bryn Athyn eleven Saturday, to win by a single tally 7-0. The hair-raising affair with its multitude of sensational runs was witnessed by 1000 spectators at the local gridiron.

According to all predictions, this game was to be a close one, with the outcome uncertain. It followed the predictions to a tee. After the locals scored their touchdown, the Red and White of Bryn Athyn threatened time and again fighting and tearing to cross the pay-off stripe but their efforts were to no avail, for the home-townners seemed to have a slight edge on the protection of their territory.

With the smack of the calfskin against the piskin that marked the opening kick-off the Bunnies started with a typical display of their heads up brand of football by recovering the ball from an on-side kick which gave the locals legal possession of the ball on Bryn Athyn's 40.

From here it took them exactly 5 plays to pass the wide tape. On a series of sustained drives the Red and Grey easily brought the ball to the 25 yard marker. This was made possible by the smart backing ability of "Bud" Collier who had been the brains of the unit in last week's contest. With 25 yards to go Dan DiMidio reversed the inflated oval to "Shorty" Phillips who by spectacular broken field running galloped the remaining yardage to score for Bristol. Van Lenten by a perfectly placed kick allowed for the extra point. The score was 7-0 at the end of the first period.

After this tally Bryn Athyn became inspired and played a brand of football which was far superior to their play but, however, Bristol defended their lead with vigor and fought the Red and White to a standstill.

The highlight of this game next to the touchdown was the Bunnies' march for another score, but this was stopped by the final whistle ending the ball game.

With the ball on their own 45, Bliz Wollard made an eleven yard gain to Bryn Athyn's 44 yard line. This was called back due to a five yard penalty for off-side. Then a long pass was thrown to Jim Orazi who received the ball on the Red and White's 30 yard stripe, making it first down. Eager to score the locals pulled an end run but no gain was recorded. After this a few more yards were chewed up and then this whole affair was brought to a magnificent conclusion.

Although Bryn Athyn had seven first downs to Bristol's five, the latter outscored the victors in scrimmage. Bristol trampled up the field to get 101 yards while the boys from the academy gained 81 yards. Both teams were very poor on their passing attacks. The hometowners tried five tosses and completed one while Bryn Athyn attempted nine and missed all. The Red and White, however, had a decided margin in their punting averages. Their booter hit 45 yards for the whole contest while the Bunnies marked off 35 yards.

RAIN PREVENTS GRID GAME

St. Ann's A. A.'s opening home game of the season was called off because of wet grounds. The Morrisville Tigers were supposed to have been the visiting team. The "Saints" must now wait two weeks before they can play at home for they have an engagement with the Doylestown Moose next week on the Doylestown field. Coach "Bill" Dougherty will drill his players tomorrow night.

A WILD PITCH — THE BEGINNING OF THE END

Red Rolfe, Yank third baseman, is shown sliding safely into second when Cliff Melton, Giant pitcher, hurled a wild one which got away from Catcher Danning. This was one of the plays which signed the death warrant of the Giants, who lost the series in the fifth game in New York City.

ANDALUSIA ACES NOSE
OUT VISITORS, 6 TO 0

A sixty yard run by "Bobby" Lange, former Bensalem High School back-field ace, gave the Andalusia Aces a close 6-0 victory over the Northeast Aces yesterday afternoon on the latter's field before a large crowd which braved the threatening weather to see the three A's in action.

Lange's gallop came in the second period and prevented the clubs from battling to a stalemate. Lange outran three Northeast backs to cross the final chalk strip. The try for the extra point, a pass, failed.

Joe Diamanti's boys outplayed the visitors, scoring nine first downs to the Northeast team's four. Good punting on the part of the invaders' fullback, Kelly prevented the A's from rolling up a larger score.

It was the second consecutive win for Andalusia who beat the South Phillies last week and in the previous game held the strong Greeby A. A. club to a scoreless tie.

thrown down their rifles and have refused to fight despite the fact that they were the troops who helped to kidnap Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek in order to force him into war on Japan.

Third, that two important Chinese generals, Han Fu-Chu, the war lord of Shantung, and Yen Hsi-Shan, the war lord of Shansi, are wavering in their loyalty to Nanking and probably will desert Generalissimo Chiang. Thus they would deliver two huge provinces to the Japanese, which would effectively end China's hopes to win the war.

Fourth, the Japanese, operating from bases in four cities, Tientsin, Peiping, Kalgan and Tatung, have pushed triple columns deep along the principal north-to-south railways, with the apparent intention of advancing even south of the Yellow River and seizing China's only east-to-west railway.

Out of the total of 41 students in instrumental classes 25 are beginners and the remaining 16 have had a year's experience. It is expected that more will probably join this group. Mr. Frick also states that he hopes to have the Bensalem Band out at all football games played on the home field.

According to the first issue of the Bensalemite one of the acutest needs of the school library is an adequate supply of modern fiction. Other books which should be added to the library shelves include: good travel books, popular science, modern poetry and literature books. Problems in Sport Psychology

By BURNLEY

Perhaps some learned professor of psychology will kindly come to my assistance in solving a problem that has been bothering me for many a semester.

Briefly, it is this: Why are almost all football coaches pessimistic in their pre-game and pre-season predictions, while baseball pilots usually go in for optimistic forecasts?

It practically amounts to a diamond tradition that a baseball manager whose team has first division possibilities must go on record as predicting a pennant for his club.

Yet, if a grid mentor ever came out and said, "We're a cinch for the Rose Bowl," everybody within the sound of his voice would have to be revived by smelling salts. Veteran grid followers might even die from the shock if Coach Terp of good old Doghouse U. actually predicted a victory for his men, even if they were playing the Old Men's Home or the Fat Men's Chowder and Marching Club.

In the coming world series, you'll see both diamond pilots prophesying a triumph for their teams, and Presidents Frick and Harbridge will go on record as forecasting a win for their respective leagues. Why shouldn't a football coach turn optimistic once in a while, just for a change or something?
